MR. GOSLINGTON'S ADVENTURE

He Offers a Seat to a Lady in an Elevated Car-Unexpected Outcome.

This," said Mr. Goslington, "I confess is rather puzzling to me, but I am inclined to think that I get left in it.

"The elevated car in which I rode home late yesterday afternoon was as usual at that hour crowded, and so as usual I hung on by a strap. But a few stations along the man in front of whom I had been standing got up and went out, leaving a vacant seat, which of course I might have taken but which I did not take, for a step or two further back in the car there was standing, holding on by a strap, a young woman talking with a young man who was standing near her, holding on by the next strap.

"What I did was to indicate to this young woman that here was a seat for her, at which she turned and stepped across the car, as I supposed, to occupy the seat that I had thus left for her. But just what she did was this:

"Sitting down on one side of this seat, she edged along a little further on that side, thus making her next neighbor there, a woman, move along a little, and thus providing half the seat vacant, and now she invited the young man with whom she had been talking to sit down beside her, which he did, all this leaving me to stand there, completely ignored, in front of them.

"Sitting down as she did she discommoded the person, the woman sitting next to her, and crowding in to sit beside her, as he had to do, the young man with her discommoded the person sitting next to him. Thus this lady would appear to have proceeded when her opportunity came with entire disregard of everybody but herself, seeking with utter selfishness solely her own comfort and pleasure, or so we might have thought, if it were possible to think ill of any woman, which I do not; but while the situation was a little puzzling, it certainly did seem as if she had sort of made a gump of me, don't you think?"-New York

The Aztec Calendar.

The Aztecs of Mexico had a calendar of their own and one copy is engraved in stone and now preserved in the National Museum of Mexico. Fifty-two years constituted a cycle with the Aztecs. Each year had 365 days. There were 18 months of 20 days each and five additional days that were considered very unlucky, and were devoted to human sacrifice. The month was divided into four weeks of five days each. The days were such names as "Rain," "Monkey" and "Small Bird," and each day of the month had a name. Whole phrases were used for the names of some months.

Much Power from Niagara. Power generated at Niagara Falls is to be distributed all over Canada. Bids have been asked on 10,000 tons of structural steel for the Canadian government. The steel is to be used for towers which will support the cables used in transporting the current. Already power generated at Niagara is being sent to a distance of more than 12 miles, and it is the intention of the Canadian government to increase this distance, says the Scientific American. Towns in every direction about Niagara will be supplied.

Woman's Suspicious Reticence.

Are women beginning to talk less in the hope of thus better pleasing men? If so, while commending the motive, we would unhesitatingly question the method. The mere music of their voices as contrasted with the raucous male note easily counterbalances any possible disparity in the ideas expressed. Upon all grounds we cry out for loosening of the delicate tongues now so strangely and so suspiciously stilled.

Even to China Land.

The equal-rights wave has reached the shores of China, and it is reported that a number of wives in Canton have left their husbands, saying that they will no longer be subject to them. The wives have had the worst of it however, as the law gives power to imprison them, and they have had to suffer the consequences of their rash resolves.

Work of Zambesi Missions. A pamphlet recently issued by Andrew Murray gives a brief survey of missions south of the Zambesi. There are 31 different missionary organizations at work, ministering to over 10,000,000 people. The student volunteer movement in South Africa has put 84 young missionaries in the field since 1896.

THAT RECORD JUMP BY WASHINGTON.

Alleged Origin of Thackeray's Story of the 22 Foot Leap.

Three college athletes have had an ideal shattered by reading a paragraph in a speech that Sir G. Trevelyan made in London before the Publishers Circle at a recent dinner. These men, in addition to being athletes, are devoted to Thackeray and 'The Virginians."

There is a reference in that book to the prowess of George Washington as an athlete, particularly as a broad jumper. This is to the effect that Washington was able to jump 22 feet, which, considering that it was away back in the eighteenth century, was some leap. Although the best American record now is 24 feet 71/4 inches, it has not been standing so long, and in the early days of American athletics 22 feet was a remarkable performance in the broad

These three used to pride themselves on knowing about that performance credited to Washington, and they pointed out how in 1876 and for three years following the American championship was won by leaps of less than 20 feet, and that from 1880 to 1885 inclusive the champion did not do 22 feet, although close to it on several occa-

So they used always to tell folks who asked about great broad jumpers that Washington held the American record from 1752 to 1885. What shattered all this was the following from the Trevelyan speech:

"I was present at a dinner where Thackeray discoursed to a delightful audience of young people about "The Virginians," which he was then writing and which seemed to fill his mind to the exclusion of everything else. Among other matters he asked us, all around the table, what was the widest jump any of us had ever known, and when we agreed upon twenty-one feet, he said: 'Then I must make George Washington jump one foot more,' '

A Little Devil in the Heart.

An insane devil lurks in the heart of even the most sainted woman. It is the little devil that makes a young wife ask her devoted husband which of the two he would save if she and her mother were drowning, writes William J. Locke in his story 'Simple Septimus," in the American Magazine. It is the same little devil that is respoisible for infinite mendacity on the part of men. "Have you said that to another woman?" No; of course he hadn't, and the wretch is instantly perjured. "My immortal soul," says the good fellow, instantaneously converted into an atrocious liar; and the little devil cooes with satisfaction and curls himself up snugly to sleep.

Uses of Irish Peat.

Consul Henry S. Culver, of Cork, writes that the peat beds of Ireland may vet become a valuable asset in the country's industrial development other than for fuel if, as is now claimed upon the authority of an Austrian experimenter, the fibres of the remains of the reeds and grasses of which peat is composed can be utilized not only for paper-making and carpets, but for weaving the finest fabrics as well. The claim is put forth that the fibre is elastic and durable, and, being a non-conductor of heat, the cloth manufactured from it is as tough as linen and as warm aswoolen.

India-Gestion.

Here is a story the bishop of London told John Morley the other day, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. They were holding an "exam." in an Eastend school, and the teacher was explaining the chief products of the Indian empire. One child recited a list of cosmestibles. "Please, miss, India produces curries and pepper and citron and chillies and chutney and—and—" "Yes, yes, and what comes after that?" "Please, miss, I don't remember." "Yes, but think. What is India so famous for?" "Please, 'm, India-gestion."

Hens Hatch Fish.

Chinamen have a way of tricking hens, so that they assist in the hatching of fish. Fish eggs are carefully placed in an egg shell, which is then sealed and put under an unsuspecting hen. In a few days the spawn is warmed into life and the contents of the shell are then cast into a shallow pool, where the sunshine completes the work. 1 7,37

Demand for Artificial Flowers.

Makers of artificial flowers in New York city are receiving an unusual number or orders from all parts of the country for the fall and winter trade. Most of the supply for the nation comes from New York, where more money is spent for the manufacture of imitation flowers than in any other city in the world.

Picking Out a Job.

Little dogs start the hare, but great ones catch it.

"BUNK" OR "BUNC."

The Former the Northern, the Latter the Southern Spelling.

"It never occurred to me that there could be any two ways of spelling the word 'bunk,' " said the scholarly appearing person who was studying the sporting section of the newspaper. "But I happened to pick up a Memphis newspaper the other day and as a head to a speech made by Commissioner Loomis in Tokic recently I read: "Loomis Hands Out the Bunc.'

"Now, without endeaving to go into the merits of the case so put I want to say only that the headline meant that Mr. Loomis was accused of softsoaping the Japanese he addressed. The only other authority for the spelling of the word comes from the sporting cartoonists, whose work I study carefully. They are unanimous in spelling it 'bunk."

"It appears to me that the Southern version is based on a belief that the word is a diminutive of 'buncombe.' The Northern spelling may be due to the belief that a person who may be bunked is a person of sleepy or dopy nature, who might as well be lying in a bunk, wrapped in slumber. Therefore when a person is bunked he is rendered sleepy. That is merely conjecture."

The Dust of the Earth.

Expecting a visit from the super-Intendent of an adjacent Sunday school one Sunday afternoon, one enterprising teacher, anticipating the line of questions which would be asked of the scholars, selected a boy from her class to answer each question. As she had figured it out, the visitor would first ask the pupils the question, "Who made you?" and the pupil was, of course, to answer "God." The next question was to be "Of what?" to which the answer was to be "Of the dust of the earth." Unfortunately between the time Sunday school was called to order and the visiting superintendent had taken the floor, the first pupil was taken sick and obliged to go home. The teacher did not have the opportunity to readjust her force, and when the first question was asked, the second boy thought it a good opportunity for him to get his answer and get it off his mind; so to the question, "Who made you?" he answered, "Of the dust of the earth."

"Oh, no," said the visitor. "God made you."

"No, sir; He did not," said the youngster. "The little boy that God made has gone home sick, and I am the dust of the earth."-Judge.

Famous Epicures.

In the ceiling of the dining room in Nero's "golden house," on the Palatine hill, were compartments inlaid with ivory which revolved, showering perfumes and flowers on the guests. Flowers were presented to the guests by slaves. They were crowned with wreaths. Usually after one course the tables were removed and others placed before th Throughout the meal drinking continued until the banqueters fell under the table stupefied. In those days men lived to eat. Great generals spent fortunes accumumulated in years of warfare in gratifying their appetites. Lucullus on one dinner with Cicero and Pompey spent 50,000 drachmas, or $7,000. Pithylus, who was famed for the delicacy and originality of his dinners, wrapped bis tongue in linen when not using it. That he might better appreciate flavors of the viands he had it cleaned with fish skin before din-

Time, to the Hundredth of a Second. Of the many new devices that modern inventions has recently given to the world, perhaps there is no more ingenious contrivance than the electrical chronometer, the product of a Parisian brain, by means of which an automobile race can be timed even to the one-hundredth of a second.

One of these instruments is placed at the starting-point of the race and another at the finish, the two being connected by a charged wire. When the start has been made a current of electricity is immediately sent through the line, which deflects a needle, making a dot upon a paper on a revolving drum. At the finish another dot is made upon the paper; the exact time may then be discovered by means of the scale which connects these markings.

Memory of Animals.

"The elephant's memory is proverbial," said F. Martin Duncan, F. Z. S., at the New Gallery Photographic Exhibition, "but that of other beasts of the jungle is hardly less noteworthy."

Tigers in captivity always remember a kindness and recognize a friend even after the lapse of months. Lions which have been in a zoological garden for years have also been known to show signs of abject fear when visited by native hunters, from the country where they had their early home.-London Daily Mail.

Surely the Limit.

A friend was once talking with a crazy woman, when a stingy man passed by. "Do you see that man," said she, with cunning smile. "You could blow his soul through a humming-bird's bill, into a mosquito's eye, and the mosquito wouldn't wink."

Vices and Virtues.

Do not consider any vice as trivial, and therefore practice it; do not consider any virtue as unimportant, and therefore neglect it. -Bonar.

Farmer Thoughtful of Clerk. An amusing incident occurred in hotel a few nights ago. It appears that a farmer from South Jersey, who was unusually ignorant of city ways, went to the hotel with his son. The father retired early, but the son went out to "see the town." At 12:30 o'clock the farmer went down stairs and inquired of the night clerk if the boy had retired yet. He was told that he had not. The father went back to his room. An hour later he again appeared before the clerk and said:

"Hain't Jack in yet?" Again he was informed that the lad was out. The old man made several subsequent trips, and still his boy was among the missing. Finally at 3:30 o'clock the farmer trudged wearily down the stairs and asked again if his boy had returned.

"No, he's not in yet," replied the night clerk.

"Waal, I guess he won't come inthen. Guess you needn't wait up any longer."

Message Bound on Goose's

Fred Walton, a hunter of Granite City, Mo., killed a wild goose recently and message telling of boundless wealth, sickness and privation, of ahandoned hope, was found bound to its neck. The message read:

"July 8, 1910, 120 miles due north of White Horse Rapids, on Pine Creek. I have been sick since June 15, and I feel certain I am going to die. My right arm is broken above the elbow, due to falling from the side of the mountain.

"I can hardly walk, and, although there is flour in my cabin, I have no way of cooking it, as my condition such that I cannot do the work. Back of my cabin, two hundred yards up the gulch, where I have dug, there is a body of almost solid gold.

"It will never do me any good. Winter will be here in a few weeks. and if I am not found before then I will die from freezing to death. "There is absolutely no hope for

Will Pool 1911 Crops.

Burley tobacco growers of Kentucky, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and Missouri, in conference at Lexington adopted an agreement to pool their 1911 crops. Mass conventions will be called in each of the states for December 30 to elect delegates to a general meeting on January 5, when officers will be elected and a general organization effected.

More than one hundred thousand growers producing in excess of three hundred million pounds of tobacco annually, are affected by the new organization, its promoters assert, inas-much as the agreement adopted pro-vides that no tobacco shall be raised in

One of the provisions of the new organization will limit the salary of any officer to $5,000 a year. Delegates to the meeting (declared that one of the potent reasons for the collapse of the Burley Tobacco Society, which failed to engineer a pool of the 1910 crop, was the salary of $25,000 paid to its president, Clarence LeBus.

The recent drop in the price of pork has enabled many of us to do as the old darky of whom we once heard says an exchange. Henry was a man of all jobs around the town where he lived. He was especially in demand about springtime when the women wanted their yards cleaned up and flower beds made and frequently accepted pay in the shape of a meal or some little gift from the family larder. After a good many years' trial he succeeded in getting a pension, to gether with considerable back pay. He immediately changed his method of living and abandoned everything that looked like work. One day a lady sent him word by her husband that she had a few little jobs, and if he would come and do them for her sue would give him a nice jowl. Scorning the offer Henry replied: "Thank ye, boss; but you go and tell Miss Saliie I'se eatin' a little furder back on de hog now.'

Through It Col. Butler's Triumphant Pigtail Should Protrude.

Thomas Butler, a Colonel in the army of the United States early in the nineteenth century, died in New Orleans in 1805 in the midst of his celebrated controversy with Gen. Wilkinson regarding the wearing of his queue.

A HOLE IN HIS COFFIN.

Col. Butler insisted on wearing his hair in the old fashioned style in disobedience to Wilkinson's orders. According to Pierce Butler in his recently published biography of Judah P. Benjamin, while the dispute was still raging Butler died and left directions that a hole should be bored in the head of his coffin and that he should be borne to the grave with his triumphant pigtail prortruding in defiance. The family tradition is that these directions were carried out.

Only the Truth. A virtue carried to excess may become ridiculous. To such action one may well preach, "Be temperate in all things," even in virtue! Amelia Opie, the English authoress, was not content with any half measures, as is shown in a letter from her, quoted in "Quaker Pictures," by Wilfred Whitter. Mrs. Opie's course of conduct is to be respected as proceeding from her conscientious nature, but fiction-readers may congratulate themselves that her opinions are not

Before she became a Quaker she wrote fiction. After her conversion she was asked to contribute a story to a magazine. Her answer to the editor ran as follows:

"Thou knowest, or ought to know that since I became a Friend I am not free to what is called to make a story. I will write a fact for thy perusal, or any little matter of history or truth, or a poem if thou wishest, but I must not lie and say such and such a thing took place when it did not.

The Ozark Mountains. The Ozark mountains form a plateau region, from 1,200 to 1,800 feet above the sea level, extending with gradual upliftings from the southern part of Illinois into Missouri, then, sloping down, enters Arkansas and Indiana Territory, and extends into Kansas. The highest point is Pilot Knob, in Iron county, Mo. The hills are in separate peaks or knobs, and not continuous ridges. The irregularities which show mountain making processes as existing are not visible here.

The Ozark mountains, or Ozark Plateau, belong with the oldest mountain regions of the world, and denudation is slowly but surely removing the once lofty mountains. The plateau belongs to the Tertiary period, but Pilot Knob, and vicinity belong to the Palyaeozoic age. North of the Ozark slope and south of the On the southern slope are large for-

Remedy for Choking.

"Raising the left arm as high as you can will relieve choking much more rapidly than the act of thumping one's back," said a physician, "and it is well that every one should know it, for often a person gets choked while eating where there is no one near to thump him. Very frequently at meals and when they are at play, children get choked while eating, and the customary manner of relieving them is to slap them sharply on the back. The effect of this is to set the obstruction free. The same thing can be brought about by raising the left hand of the child as high as possible, and the relief comes much more quickly. In happenings of this kind there should be no alarm, for if the child sees that older persons or parents get excited the effect is bad. The best thing is to tell the child to raise its left arm, and immediately the difficulty passes away."

A Dead Bird.

Samuel Butler, the witty but eccentric author of "Erewhon"which means "Nowhere"-and of many other remarkable and suggestive books, is now more read than during his lifetime. He died in 1902. In one of his note-books he tells this incident, which must have amused the great Charles Darwin.

Frank Darwin told me his father was once standing near the hippopotamus cage when a little boy and girl, aged four and five, came up. The hippopotamus shut his eyes for a minute.

"That bird's dead," said the little girl. "Come along."

Early Railroad Station.

The oldest structure in the world originally built for a railroad station is the now disused L. & N. depot in Lexington, Ky. It was begun in 1833. From the northwest corner of this building the first passenger railway car west of the Alleghanies started on its daily run to Frankfort. It has been used for almost threequarters of a century and stands as a landmark to remind the present generation of the old order of things in Lexington and central Kentucky.

You can tie them, but you can't beat them.

Blushing a Sign of Sense.

Sir Arthur Mitchell, K. C. B., of Edinburgh, who knows much that is strange about dreams, laughter and other commonplace human characteristics, has just advanced the consoling theory that blushing is an achievement of which every one who can blush should be proud.

He says it requires brains to tlush. Idiots cannot blush, neither can animals. Sir Arthur calls attention to the fact that tiny infants do not blush, although they learn to at an early age, just as soon, in fact, as the brain begins to exercise its functions. In blushing, he says, the mind always must be affected. It is always and only a bodily expression of mental state. It is a natural thing for a blusher to say that he had tried not to blush. No individual blushes of his own free will. The blush arises without call instantaneously and vanishes almost as quickly. Neither for its coming nor its going is there any exercise of volition. It is controlled, Sir Arthur says, solely by the brain, and is a positive sign that there is an active brain there.

The Absent Mindedness of Genius.

The absent mindedness of great thinkers is a well known phenomenon. When Morse had completed his wonderful telegraphic system he confessed to a difficulty which appeared to him almost insurmountable. "As long as poles can be used," he said to a friend one day, "it is easy. But what must be done when we come to a bridge? We cannot use poles there, and the wire would break of its own weight without some support." "Well," replied the friend. thoughtfully for a moment, and then exclaimed. "I never thought of that. It's the very thing." This instance of mental concentration on one leading idea to the exclusion of all others is almost as remarkable as that told of Sir Isaac Newton, who cut a hole in his study door to allow his favorite cat to come and go freely, and then cut a smaller one for the use of her kitten.-Dundee Advertiser.

Evolution of Marriage. About the fact that polyandry, or the marriage of one woman to several men, was once a widely established usage there is no room for doubt. Caesar found it in Britain, and Tacitus is authority for the statement that it was practiced among the Germans of the early times. It is impossible to be exact about the chronological order of the various forms of marriage. In all probability the primitive state of man was one in which marriage did not exist, except in its plural character, when all the men and women in the community were regarded as equally married to one another. Then probably came polyandry, followed by polygamy, which was finally replaced by the present form-a system which may well be called "recent" in comparison with the length of time that human society has ex-

A red nose is by no means a sign of drunkenness, and is as common among teetotalers as tipplers. Indigestion is responsible almost more than anything else for red noses, while excessive tea drinking is apt to play havoc with the complexion in general and with the nose in particular. Sometimes the congested nose is a sign of some serious disorder of the heart, or it may point to a sluggish circulation. The habit of inhaling cigarette smoke and puffing it through the nostrils may contribute to the external wealth of color.

ONE PLACE IN EACH STATE AND TERRITORY DESIGNATED FOR ATTEMPT.

ough Test in 48 Second-Class Offices.

Washington, D. C., The board of trustees of the postal savings bank system has approved a list of fortyonly people who ever asked for it eight second-class postoffices at which were the agents of the company, the plan will be given its first trial. the list includes one office for each state and territory. The list they formally approved was selected after careful investigation by the druggist said: "Yes, I did keep | the postal officials with a view to makthat once, but when I ran out of the ing the first test of the service as thorough as possible under the limited appropriation of $100,000 provided by congress, which includes all the expenses and equipment, including the engraving and printing forms certificates, bonds, clerical assistance, etc.

Owing to the smallness of this appropriation it has been impossible to establish postal savings banks during the first year in the large city postoffices of the country. Communities were chosen in which the conditions were exceptionally favorable for the development of a postal savings business, mostly indu rial centers where wage earners will be especially benefited by, the kind of banking facilities afforded.

A large patronage of the service is expected by the officials from foreignborn Americans in these cities who are now remitting considerable sums to their native countries, usually in the form of money orders. Many of the places selected, particularly those in the west, are not adequately provided with other saving institutions.

It is probable that the plans devised for the new postal savings system will be given at least a month's trial in the original forty-eight offices before others are added to the list, although it is expected that the number of offices will be largely increased before the end of the current fiscal year. The offices designated follow:

THE PASSING OF THE HORSE.

The consumption of horse beef is increasing with great rapidity in Europe. and it is suggested that even if some genius should build an electrical storage battery so cheap, so convenient. and so efficient as to relieve the horse and the mule of their jobs as beasts of burden they would still be bred as cattle and swine are for their flesh as a foodstuff.

That the horse will no longer be required as a beast of burden ere this century is half fulfilled seems probable. Then the grain and hay fed him and the pasture on which he grazes will be at the disposal of other farm animals unless the appetite of man shall demand the flesh of the horse as food. Of course, the horses will be bred for racing or for the carriage and the saddle.

Edison announces that he has perfected a storage battery that will serve the purpose. It is confidently predieted that soon every plow and farm vehicle will be supplied with power, and that it will cheapen production enormously, enabling a single farmhand to do more work in a day, plowing, cultivating, planting and hauling than a half score of men can now accomplish, though each were aided by a team of horses or mules. If that consummation shall be realized, we ought to hear much less complaint about the high cos of living than we hear now.-Washington Post.

"Your story is good," said the publisher to the author who had called to learn his fate, "but there is one tibing about it that I can't under-

"What's that?" queried the author. "You have the climax in the middle chapter instead of the last," said the publisher. "Why is that?"

"Oh," answered the author, "that is a little scheme of mine to keep women from knowing how the story is going to turn out by reading the last chapter first."

"I have just ordered such a sweet frock. It is cinnamon, and there is a hat to go with it, trimmed with cherries and biscuit shoes and stock-

A Home-Coming

Although a murderer Hans Olsen was a commonplace individual. Had he had a wooden leg or an old mother the papers might have worked up some public interest, if not enthusiasm, in his behalf, but as it was the jury returned a verdict of manslaughter, and Hans, without the aid of counsel even, found himself sentenced to seven years' penal servitude, and was delighted. Seven years instead of twenty! For that was what he had expected.

"Your wife wishes to see you." Hans Olsen was standing lost in thought when the policeman entered and announced Marie. Strangely enough, he had forgotten about her in his excitement, and now that he was reminded of her existence, all the pleasure of relief left him.

"Marie!" It was all he could say and awkwardly and shyly shook hands with her. "Seven years," she sobbed, "I am not to see you for seven long years -and we have been married only six months!" 'Yes, it does seem like a long parting dear, when you put it that way. A man need not change in seven years, unless he likes, but a woman-" he finished with a groan. "You must go away," he continued, "there is enough in the savings bank to keep you for a year. Go to some quiet country place. My people won't know you. Call yourself Mrs. Hansen. That will be sufficient. But after the first year-"I'll work. I can live on little, very little indeed."

"And if the little is not there?" "It shall be-it must be," she cried. "Good-bye, Hans. I must go, but I'll wait for you and as I forgive now, so will I keep my heart for you. Come at any time, you will be welcome always."

They shook hands and separated. Hans Olsen went to Vridslose, and Marie to Aarhus, and each thought this world a hell.

But time passes, even in jail, and in due course Olsen began to count the days to his release. He had served nearly six years, and though a little doubtful as to what allowance would be made for good behavior, he hoped to be free at the end of the sixth year.

It was characteristic of the man's frame of mind that he should resolve to call on his wife unexpectedly. He found her address, and fate having ordained it that he should be released from Vridsloese the money he had earned proved more than sufficient to pay the railroad fare. In the train he worked himself up to a high pitch of excitement. He pictured his wife, totally oblivious of his existence, enjoying the society of others.

"If she has been unfaithful," he hissed. "I'll kill her.

There was no response to his repeated taps on the cottage door, and he pushed it open somewhat impatiently, and found himself in a square room of comfortable, if modest, appearance. A fire was burning brightly, and it was evident that someone had just tended it. A small table was set prepared for tea, and Hans Oisen noticed with a queer sensation, that the occupant of the cottage was expecting a guest. "She can't have known I was coming," he muttered, and the longer he regarded the cups and plates, the harder his thoughts became.

"But I'll kill her if there is another," he cried out aloud as he went outside to see if she was coming. He caught a glimpse of a woman's dress among the trees and rushed back into the house, waiting tremblingly behind the door for his wife.

She entered lightly enough, but the moment she caught sight of his passionate face she started back and screamed.

"Oh, so you are surprised," he cried, catching her by the wrists and peering into her face. "Why, is it really you. Hans?"

she exclaimed in relief; but his face hardened. "Who is the other?" he growled.

You could not have been expecting She guessed his suspicions, and all woman in her was roused, as with a wrench she freed herself. "You-you think I have been unfaithful," she said in a low tone. 'That's what you have been suspecting all these years, while I was replied with flashing eyes. "If you do not tell me I'll kill you," he cried, grasping her by the shoulder. With a little cry of pain she sprang away.

"You coward." The reproach maddened him, and he seized her by the throat.

"Mamma, mamma!" A shrill oice preceded its owner into the room, but the moment the small boy entered he stood dumb with terror. Hans Olsen's hands fell to his

Good Will Toward All Men

By ETHEL BARRINGTON

sharp, bleak gusts the wind swept fitfully through Main shaking their vantage points, on roof and porch, great pointed icicles that hung in glistening array, like crystal prisms on a chandelier. In the road thick snow had packed and hardened, while the air vibrated with the jingle of bells decorating alike sleighs and runnered wagons. At its head, the thoroughfare widened, to split in four directions, and in one of the triangles thus formed rose the Brick Hotel. It was an exposed spot, one to be avoided in rough weather, affording as it did full scope to the wind to play mad pranks; even, at its wildest, to sweep unfortunate pedestrians before it, like dust before a giant's broom.

Yet on Christmas eve, Maris Favor, returning from the office where the rush of holiday work had detained her far beyond her usual hour, paused, wondering what attracted the crowd of her fellow townsmen. She crossed to the outer edge of the gathering in the roadway, and by a flaring torch, held by a companion of the man who was speaking, she saw a street preacher. "Good-will towards all men," was the text he preached. "Good-will not alone towards those in our beloved and immediate circle; not alone towards such as we hold in careless tolerant regard, but good-will towards all, whether they have done us good or evil turns. For the advent of the Christ-child, brings with it a brooding spirit of peace to a sin-tossed world. "Which among you," cried the preacher, his voice risen to accusing note, "which among you, were all secrets known, would not be found to cherish and foster the memory of some special wrong, suffered perhaps years ago, that you hold back, and except when you pray, 'Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us.'

In the second story of the hotel one of the windows had been raised, and Maris, feeling that curious sensation which is caused by an intent regard, glanced up to encounter the concenrated gaze of the mistress of the hostelry, who leaned a little distance between the parted shutters. Maris, with sullen color mounting to her face, returned the look; power to turn aside being negatived by some strange force In the eyes that compelled hers.

She and the woman, who once had been as a mother to her only to slam the door of happiness in her face, continued to stare across the heads of the preacher and his listening audience.

The older woman leaned a little farther and, with imperative finger, beckoned the girl to enter the hotel. The action broke the spell and Maris. with a defiant negation of the head, turned to pursue her way.

The girl could not have told whether or not her name had been actually spoken, or was merely a silent cry, a part of the compelling influence she had experienced. Nevertheless her steps lagged and, though yielding had been far from her will, she presently turned about and entered the Brick

The door was open, the sitting-room warm with fire and lamp, and Rachel Castle stood listening, her face turned towards the door. "So the preacher man forced you to think of me after three years of silence?" The girl's voice quivered under the burden of mingled feelings conjured up by the meeting.

"He made the moment opportune." corrected the other. "I have thought of you always."

"Well, say your say, and let me

Mrs. Castle moved towards the fire, pushing forward a chair.

You have grown hard—I should scarcely know you, if it were not for your eyes and hair. Come, sit here, Maris. I cannot stand very long,

Unwillingly Maris took the chair indicated, while Mrs. Castle seated herself opposite. In the searching glare of blazing logs, the girl could not fail to remark the change in the other, the figure had become wasted, the face pinched. Her heart stirred uncomfortably. Despite their quarrel Maris owed much to Rachel Castlethe charity of the Brick Hotel had saved her girlhood from the poor-

"You have been ill?" she asked. "For a year; you did not hear?"

The girl shook her head, and her eyes wandered over the room noting the almost imperceptible changes that time had wrought, and welcoming the salient features that lived in her memory; the bookcase, the horse-hair sofa. the marble-topped table with its case of stuffed canaries, many of whom she had fed in life and, last of all, the man's photograph on the mantel, set in its heavy silver frame. She seemed to look long, but in reality after the first moment she could distinguish no single feature, for the hot blinding tears that she would not suffer to

"I must be going." "It's pleasant to have you, Maris." The woman ignored the suggestion. We always did sit together on Christmas eve, if you remember-" Then. as Maris offered no comment, Mrs. Castle drifted into memories of small, intimate happenings of their past daily life, of festivities, and social merriment that marked such seasons as the present one.

"I used to fancy that life would be always the same-" she continued. her voice low with the restraint she put upon herself. "Maris-" her thin hand bridged the space between their chairs and softly touched the girl's knee. You can't have lost all your sweetness. You ain't so hard as you would pretend to me?"

"Don't!" The girl rose abruptly, turning her back deliberately to the photograph in the silver frame. "When we parted I thought you hard, selfish unjust-and I kept my resentment alive, burning deep down in my heart -I wouldn't let it die, just as that preacher down stairs said. When there's a thing like that in your soul, the little shoots of tenderness of charity, that keep a woman's nature sweet, are nipped and starved. You are right -I am changed. But tonight, for the sake of what you did when I was a forlorn, motherles girl, I'd like to shake hands. Wait-" She thrust and clasped her hands behind her back as the elder woman rose, a tender longing, suffusing her pallid face, and continued in a strained and breathless sort of voice. "You thought because Ben was your son, you had a right to decide his life; you thought because you had befriended me, you could dictate my life, too. I see, now, that there was force in both arguments. At the time the hurt was too deep. I had been only the creature of your charity, where I imagined myself, all but in blood, a daughter."

"You were courageous-I watched you, always, though I never let you

"Courageous! What gave me courage to face the world after you had east me from your home? It was the knowledge that it was not in your power to take Ben from me-I sent him away myself."

"He followed you, then?" Rachel Castle sank back into the armchair. She had not known

"It's so long ago," the girl told her. 'You need not mind.'

"Why did you not take him?" the mother questioned curiously.

"Pride-wounded vanity-the fact that I must always be in your debt."

"My dear-you have wiped that out forever"-and with a yearning that would not be denied, the elder woman reached out her arms to the girl.

A shrill whistle caught the other's ear; the sound for which she waited. The express from New York must have deposited its home-coming passengers some minutes before and was again flying through the darkness to its destination.

"I wanted to be sure that you still cared," she whispered, her fingers hovering above the bowed head. "Change, you know, is the one thing we old folks have to learn to reckon with." "How could I change!" Maris lifted her head in quick resentment, but what she beheld in the close bent face silenced her.

"True-I am the one who has changed. Maris, I acknowledge, now, that having brought you two together. I should have abided by the consequences. But I was ambitious for my boy-I wanted-but that is past. In separating you two. I have built a barrier between myself and my only son -Maris"-her voice was no more than a thread of sound—"I ask you to give him back to me."

There came a quick step on the stair, outside, and in the doorway stood Ben Castle, a little blinded with the sudden glare.

"Mother-" he said, and, leaving Maris where she crouched upon the rug, Rachel Castle moved swiftly to-

"Ben!" she cried. "It's like the old Christmases to have you home, and Ben"-clinging to his broad shoulders with both frail hands, as she kissed him again-"Ben, I want you to speak and when it goes I'm glad of it!" misquoted Mr. Anthony Riggs, looking sourly at the toe of his slipper.

As Anthony Riggs lived all alone in the big house, there was no one to reply to his unpleasant remarks. Downstairs in the kitchen his one servant clattered noisily about her work. Everywhere else in the house it was very quiet. And there is no silence like that of a great house which has once known the joyful clamor of a large and happy family.

Years ago Anthony had had a love affair, but it ended most unhappily. The girl had married another man and Anthony Riggs had been left to develop into a morose old bachelorand not so very old at that.

"Christmas" comes but once a yearand I'll try to get as far away from it as I can," misquoted Mr. Riggs once more, as he kicked off his slippers and reached for his shoes. When he was buttoned tightly into his furlined ulster and his sealskin cap was pulled down over his ears there was nothing to be seen save a pair of very bright brown eyes and an aristocratic nose.

Once in the snowy streets Anthony Riggs found himself nearer to Christmas than he had been before. The shops were overflowing with holly wreaths and branches of mistletoe, toys and games and candy and nuts. Beautiful gifts were displayed in the windows and many happy, expectant faces were pressed against the plateglass panes

"Please, sir," said a small voice at Anthony's elbow, "can't you give me a job carrying your bundles?" 'What bundles?" frowned Anthony.

"Your Christmas presents-what you're going to buy, sir," said the little boy, respectfully. "I'm not going to buy any presents," replied Anthony quite fiercely. "Here's something for you-go and buy your own gifts and don't bother me!" He thrust a dollar bill into the eager little fingers and strode on, unmindful of the curious glances of those who had overheard his conversation with the little lad.

A glittering window full of jewels was in that same shop he had once purchased a ring for Mary Wood. The ring had been returned to him and he had flung it into the farthest corner of his desk. It was there now.

He turned away and sauntered on. In front of his own church, friendly hands drew him into the brightly lighted basement of the edifice where the annual Christmas bazaar was in

There was a merry throng of men. women and children moving to and fro among the booths devoted to the sale of fancy articles, toys and candy. Supper tables occupied one end of the room and in an obscure corner a fortune teller's tent was made of gay shawls. In the middle of the room stood a gigantic Christmas tree, loaded with gifts wrapped in tissue pa-

"Ten cents will entitle you to a gift from the tree," explained his guide. "I don't like presents," said Anthony grimly.

Deacon Smithers smiled quizzically. 'Very well, suit yourself,' Anthony! There is the fortune teller-perhaps she will predict a happy future for you! There is the supper table, that will insure you a good meal-and the booths—pay your money and take your choice!" He moved away and left Anthony Riggs standing pale and cold in the midst of the happy crowd.

Perhaps it was because he did not know what else to do that Anthony awaited his turn at the fortune teller's tent, and once within its dim recesses he felt foolishly aware that the future held nothing for him that he did not know.

The gipsy's dark head was concealed in the folds of a lace mantilla; from the flowing sleeves of her red velvet bodice, two slim brown arms and hands flashed out and caught his large hand. The lace-draped head bent over his palm. .

"You have had much sorrow," said the gipsy in a low musical voice, "but much of it has been your own making! Do the things I shall tell you and you will live to be very happy and see your dearest wish gratified!" Anthony smiled sardonically. "And the three things I shall do?" he asked. "The day after tomorrow is Christmas day. Tomorrow night you must make three persons happy. Find three persons who are poor and needy and sorrowful and take them to your home and provide them with a bountiful dinner; have gifts for them and when they have gone away blessing youthen, you may receive a gift your-

"What will it be? I don't want a gift-I haven't kept Christmas for years," protested Anthony, as he placed some money on the table.

"Time you did, then! Don't forget-eing happy. And stay—" A slim hand arrested his going.

"Yes?" Anthony's voice was very

"Be sure to have that ring in readiness-you may need it!"

And the next instant Anthony found himself elbowed out of the tent by impatient waiters at the door, and without another glance about the decorated room he left the church and went home, much perturbed.

Of course, Anthony Riggs knew that the fortune teller could be none other than some member of his church who was familiar with more or less of the detail of his life and habits. He was surprised at his own lack of indignation because his private affairs had been discussed by a stranger-indeed, he almost felt a glow of gratification that he was still numbered among those to whom something wonderful might happen.

"I'll try it, anyway," said Anthony that night as he blew out his candle. 'It can do no harm.'

It is a simple matter to make poor people happy. Anthony Riggs found it so. The day before Christmas was marked by a series of galvanic shocks for the servant maid in the basement of Anthony's fine house. Before night the pantries were filled with delicious viands and the smell of spices and mincemeat pervaded the house.

Anthony's three persons became six, for it was so easy to add another one and still another to the little company he had invited. They were old men and women and they enjoyed the feast of good things with a pleasure that made Anthony's heart ache as it had never ached since the day when Mary Wood had sent back his

At last he sent them home in carriages laden with the remains of the dinner and with many gifts that would add comfort to declining years. The best gift of all was that Anthony Riggs had promised not to forget them-he would be their benefactor till they had passed into the hands of the great benefactor.

When he was alone in the brightly lighted parlor, with the blaze of the chandelier falling on the silver threads in his black hair, Anthony thought of the bitter years he had wasted -years in which he might have made many persons happy. The reward of good deeds was warm in his heart this night and he forgot that there was not one to offer him a gift with loving words. He had received the greatest of all gifts-the love and gratitude of his fellow men.

'And You-You Meant What You Promised?-That Happiness Would Come to Me?"

The door softly opened and a woman crept in, small, slender woman with dusky hair and dark eyes shining

Anthony Riggs did not look up. He had forgotten that the fortune teller had promised him a gift that night. On his little finger was a small ring set with a single pearl. "Anthony!" The visitor's voice was low and musical. "Mary Wood," said Anthony hoarsely; and then with a glance at the black lace draped about her head, he "You were the fortune teller last night?"

"Yes." "And you-you meant what you promised?—that happiness would

"It has come, Anthony," she faltered drawing near to him. "We were so mistaken-you and I-and the years have been long. I am free now-they said you needed me and that night when I saw your bitter face I knew you needed the influence of a greater love than mine before we met." Anthony Riggs took his sweetheart into his arms. "I have found the greater love, Mary, and its root is pity. My love for you will be better and worthier because of my love for the poor and needy. And tomorrow-tomorrow you will marry me and become my Christmas gift in truth?"

"Yes," said Mary Wood. And so Anthony Riggs slipped the little pearl ring on her finger.

Ages of Woman.

If any one had written a seven ages of woman's speech, surely most of the parts would have been played by Margaret Chanler Aldrich, who has been a prominent figure in municipal betterment movements and national causes for a good many years. Mrs. Aldrich has turned poet and is to issue shortly a volume of poems called "Sonnets for Choice." There are exactly fifty of these verse forms in the promised work and their subjects range from the varying aspects of nature in this part of the world at the different seasons to sonnets addressed to such men as Shelly, Agassiz and Pasteur, while the emotions also come within their Irony Lost Case for Lawyer. In his early days at the bar the late Lord Bowen prosecuted a prisoner who had been caught in a house at night crawling downstairs with his boots off and carrying portable property. The evidence was so overwhelming that Bowen ventured to indulge in a little irony and remarked on the thoughtfulness of the prisoner in removing his shoes, thus disturbing nobody, and in selecting only solid silver articles from the plate basket, so that the family had enough forks and spoons left for breakfast. The jury was so impressed by these extenuating circumstances that it acquitted the prisoner. Bowen never employed irony again when addressing a jury.,

Ventilation an Art in Chicago. The fine art of ventilation in Chicago is still making long strides.

Several large firms which occupy whole floors now have the big windows swing from left to right on the principle of passenger car ventilators. The position of the windows can thus be regulated according to the passage of the wind, and cleaning the panes is made easy. But the ordinary window washer can still do arctic wonders with the old-fashioned vertical sash in any office building.

MANY TAILORS DECEIVED.

More Than 1,000 Exclusive Samples Get Into the Wrong Hands.

A piece of cardboard covered with square samples of woollen cloths for men's and women's suitings might not seem to the average man a very valuable article, yet elaborate schemes to get hold of such sample cards are planned and sometimes carried through.

A couple arrived recently at the best of the Philadelphia hotels and set out to visit all the leading tailors. The man wanted a winter outfit of a comprehensive character, while the woman was just as interested in accumulating a winter wardrobe of the tailor made variety. Occupying large rooms in the hotel, there was no reason to believe that the two were anything other than they represented themselves. So when they gave the number of their suite in the hotel the samples were forthcoming.

After several days had passed without the expected orders the tailors began to send to the notel for information. The answer returned was that the two had given up their rooms and left the day before. No samples were to be found.

The number of inquirers became so large that they were referred by the hotel clerk to police headquarters. More than 1,000 samples of cloth had been sent by the tailors to the couple. Investigation showed their purpose when in the Broad street station were found two wooden packages they had checked there, filled with sample cards from which the cloth had been torn away.

The couple had succeeded in acquiring possession of the best samples of the firms that deal in the high class exclusive patterns. Of course they will sell their patterns to the cheaper firms that endeavor to reproduce them.

clusive samples is reported from Chicago. There two men rented a store in which to open a tailoring business of a high priced character and sent to the manufacturers for their samples. The samples were sent, but no orders ever came.

Later inquiry from the manufacturers showed that the firm had got no further in its career than taking the store for a month. Its object was plain when some of the best designs were turned out by the cheap mills.

Origin of the "Black Hand." There was a historical foundation for the name "black hand," accordtion days in Spain there was La Mano Nera, a secret society which fought the government and the the church. It passed, and the secret societies of southern Italy were issippi. its heirs. Twenty years or more ago a false report was raised in Spain that La Mano Nera had been revived. The story lingered in the brain of a Herald reporter, and one fine day he attempted to rejuvenate waning interest in a puzzling Italian murder case by speculating as to the coming to life of the "black hand" among Latin immigrants in America. The other newspapers seized on the idea eagerly and kept it going.

Just So. "Every man has his price," remarked the moralizer. "Perhaps he has," rejoined the demoralizer, "but it isn't every man who has his market."

ITALIAN CHEAP LIVING

Railroad Laborers Able to Get Along on Less than $10 a Month.

That Italian laborers save more money at the same wages than any other European immigrants is a statement made in a report of the department of commerce and labor. The reason is easily found, says the New York Sun.

A great majority of the unskilled laborers in this country are employed in railroad construction and simicarried on where there are no accommodations for boarding and lodging the men. The boarding camp thus becomes essential to the contracting company.

In the case of men of all nationalities except the Italians a fixed charge is made for the boarding and lodging of each man. The Italians, however, insist on buying and cooking their own food.

Investigation of the records of a contracting company employing many laborers of various nationalities in railroad construction showed that the actual cost to the company of groceries, provisions and payment for cooks, waiters, fuel, light, etc., at its boarding camps was 19 cents a meal, or $3.99 a week for each man. The men were charged $18 a month for board and lodging.

The Italians at the camps of the same company lived mostly on macaroni, sausage, cheese, sardines and bread being the staples and the others used very sparingly. The average monthly expense of each laborer was as follows: Twenty-five one and one-half pound loaves of bread at 8 cents, $2; thirty pounds of macaroni at 7 cents, $2.10; sausage, sardines and cheese, $1.50; lard, 90 cents.

Most of the Italians in addition to that amount spent an average of $3 a month for beer, cheap cigars and tobacco, which with the expense of $1 a month for shanty rent brought the total cost of living up to about $10 a month.

A Woman's Heroism.

History has presented few examples of greater heroism than that of Mrs. S. J. Rooke, the telephone operator of Folsom, N. M., who when warned by a resident of the hills to flee for her life from the flood speeding to engulf the valey, rejected the opportunity to save herself and employed the hour that intervened between the warning received and her own death by drowning in calling up subscribers by telephone and acquainting them of their danger. More than 40 families have already acknowledged their lives saved through the magnificent courage of one frail woman, whose lifeless body, with the telephone headpiece still adjusted to her ears, was found 12 miles down the canyon.

A Tree That Weeps. During the driest months of the Rhodesian year-August, September and October, a tree called by the natives Mukololo, exudes moisture in large drops from its topmost leaves, and gives the traveler who happens to be standing in the immediate vicinity the impression that a shower of rain is falling. When the natives see one of these trees dripping, they say: "The Mukololo is weeping for rain." Even Dr. Johnson said of a certain Mr. during the Lottest day the tree weeps copiously.-Strand.

Crystal Gazing.

In Africa crystal gazing seems to be common. Mr. Lang cites a case from Madagascar where a woman is alleged to have seen a French vessel on its way thither and to have recognized its occupants weeks before the ship was in sight of land. The Africans of Fez used a vessel of water and at the present day a pool of ink is in use in
